To Start: Paint the backgrounds. Align each egg properly and shut tightly, as top and bottom will be painted as one unit and opened only at the end. Pick the color scheme of your choice. Plan to use all the colors so as not to run out of any one. Mix the colors to obtain desired tones.

Hold the bottom of the egg and paint their upper parts. Let them dry.

Hold the tops and paint the bottoms.

Now the fun part: Applying the stickers! Find the proper stickers to match the outlines on the egg. Gingerly peel off the sticker.

Position it tentatively over the corresponding outline, not pressing hard until you're sure no outline remains visible. Reposition the sticker as needed to get it just right. To avoid wrinkles, press first the center of the sticker, then gently rub out to the edges with your thumb, smoothing as you go.

You may use a hair dryer to make the stickers softer.

Finishing touches... Make sure the backgrounds are completely dry. Paint the legs of the rabbit and decorate the birds with hand-painted feathers.

To open the eggs you must first cut the stickers at the seam. Squeeze the egg, crack open the back. Then have a trustworthy adult insert a razor or box cutter in the split while rotating the egg so that the stickers are cut cleanly.

Congratulations!!! You are a budding artist!
